Don't Bite the Hand That's Feeding You
https://www.loc.gov/item/ihas.100007833

Format: Sheet Music and Song Sheets

Observe
- There is a man on the cover, but it is not the person who wrote the music.
- The cover is kind of fancy.
- On the inside cover are previews of "Songs that should be in every home."
- The back cover includes other music collections by the same publisher.
- There is no specific places mentioned but it does mention "my shore" and "o'er the sea."
- It makes several references to "My Uncle Sam my."
- It is in "Tempo di Marcia."
- There is a lot of syncopation.

Reflect
- I think the purpose of this song is to make people act a certain way.
- I think the song is aimed at immigrants because it references "your home o'er the sea."
- I think maybe it was a song to be played at protests to get people upset about immigrants.
- I think it is about the the United States because of the references to "Uncle Sam," "old Glory," and the "Red, White, and Blue" which are all symbols of the U.S.
- I don't know what the melody is but it seems fast.
- I think the cover is supposed to show a respectable gentleman in a suit and fancy shirt.

Question
- I wonder when this music was published.
- Was this a popular song played on the radio or in concerts?
- How did immigrants feel about this song?
- Why was this written? Was it in response to some event? Why was the author so against immigrants?